Excerpt from A Manual of Recent and Existing Commerce From the Year 1789 to 1872: Showing the Development of Industry at Home and Abroad During the Continental System, the Protectionist Policy, and the Era of Free Trade This manual Is one Of a series treating of the Distribution and Uses Of Raw Materials, the Development of Skilled Labour, the Growth and Vicissitudes of Commerce, &c., and as such should be judged. The writer's aim has not been to describe a day' s busi ness in the port of London, or to detail a day's transactions in any mercantile house but to present in the briefest form, and based upon Official returns, a comparative view Of the commercial activity Of the principal states of the civilised world. As a means Of preparation for the higher departments of commerce, or as affording matter for reflection during inter vals Of repose, the work will, it is believed, be found equally useful; for it will assist an intelligent reader in arriving at sound conclusions with regard to the credit of any single state, and also aid him especially in a study Of the present or prospective position Of our own country.
